Texas spared as storm's fury fizzles

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. — Hurricane Allen defied predictions and spared Texas the deadly fury it had unleashed on the Caribbean, but still left behind flooding, blackouts and millions of dollars in property damage before limping into northern

Allen caused no direct injuries or deaths in Texas, either as the hurricane that battered the coast or as the tropical storm that cut into the state, but it spun off tornadoes that injured about 20 people

Meanwhile, the crew of the grounded Liberian oil tanker Mary Ellen turned down a rescue offer from the U.S. Coast Guard Sunday afternoon after riding out 175 km/h winds and mountainous seas without apparent

'If the tanker withstood Allen last night, they can feel reasonably safe out there now," a coast guard said.

Although officials had feared that the tanker carrying 507,000 barrels of crude oil might spring a leak or break up in the dashing waves, the ship's Italian captain told the Coast Guard the Mary Ellen was undamaged despite the pounding it took.

The 20 centimetres of rain that Allen brought, however, left the threat of widespread flooding. The National Weather Service issued a flood warning early today for the Texas coast from Corpus Christi to just above Brownsville and for five counties in south-central Texas near San Antonio.

Authorities told people who had been evacuated from their homes from Corpus Christi south to Browns-ville not to return. Major roads were impassable because of flooding.

About 200,000 people fled their homes Friday as authorities predicted Allen would match its deadly Caribbean rage with widespread destruction in Texas.

"We were very, very lucky," said
Gov. Bill Clements. "There is a great difference in what we were anticipating and what we received."

light alone? Despite the obvious hazard in such an arrangement, don't laugh at the schemes of Paul MacCready. He perhaps is doing more for the cause of alternate energy sources than many high-priced experiments being carried on by the scientific community.

Solar experts gathered at the University of British Columbia last week to discuss technological advances. They may not have agreed which of the various solar systems are the best, but they did agree that the public needs to know more about it. That's where a person like Dr. MacCready

He is the clever and determined American who designed ago, the first plane powered by Albatross, looking like a giant spread use.

An airplane powered by sun-dragonfly, won the holy grail of aeronautic prizes when its pilot literally bicycled it across the English Channel.

Last week MacCready's Gossamer Penguin, powered only by solar panels, flew for 15 minutes in California. MacCready says its successor, the Gossamer Challenger, is intended to have a range of up to 100 miles and reach heights of 10,000 feet, once again with its propeller spun only by electricity from solar panels. It will probably make its maiden flight next month.

Dr. MacCready, besides making technical advances, captures the public's attention with what appear to be hair-brained ideas. In his own way he is helping to accomplish precisely what the UBC solar experts beand nurtured the flight of the lieve is lacking. Conference Gossamer Condor three years speakers repeatedly pointed to the need for public education if man alone to achieve sustained solar and other alternate energy flight. Last year the Gossamer sources are ever to enjoy wide-

If their predictions that major fossil fuels such as oil will be depleted over the next 20 years prove correct then people like MacCready have a valuable role to play if North American society is to make the switch to alternate energy sources. The experts must bring their experiments and theories out of the laboratories and put them up for public digestion. It may be a little harder to put razzle-dazzle into promoting passive solar-heated homes than a solar aircraft, but it would pay off in the long run.

In the meantime Dr. Mac-Cready has yet to figure out how to keep his solar flying machine in the air if it clouds over. Peddling at 10,000 feet might not be the answer. Dr. MacCready willlikely think of something. After all, he's batting three for three. That's not bad in any league. Maybe he could toss a few ideas around with the solar experts looking for publicity.

Finally somebody'll take it

With the costs of owning and operating an automobile ever increasing, it is not surprising that a growing number of car owners are learning how to do some of their own maintenance.

Although the car makers are making it more difficult to tinker with engines (vacuum hoses, pollution abatement stuff and electronic ignitions have made it as hard to do a tune-up as to find the spark plugs on a diesel engine) the backyard mechanic can still change his car's oil. After all, sliding under the car and unscrewing the drain plug is worth a tank of gas.

The makers of auto-accessories have responded to the ageof-the-tinkerer and special oil change kits are now available in stores. Basins with form fitting plastic bags are sold to capture the spent crank-case oil. Once the oil has drained into the bag, it is tied with a wire and then, then, well, . . . then put in the garbage. What else could you do with it? The neighbors might notice if you dumped it down the storm drain at the bottom of the driveway.

Who wants dirty oil? Anyone in that position knew full well putting the oil in the garbage was only slightly better on the driveway.)

B.C. Environment Minister Stephen Rogers has responded to the new age and recruited 19 gas stations in the Victoria area to accept used oil that will eventually be recycled. If successful, the program will spread to other parts of the province.

Now tinkerers, you can relieve your conscience and do a bit for oil conservation. (Don't forget to put the drain-plug back in. Nothing worse than new, expensive oil

West sandbags its position

That is why Premier Allan Blakeney of Saskatchewan is prepared to differ on the national interest aspect of oil prices from his NDP counterparts in both the East and West. That is why Premier Bill Bennett of British Columbia, whose constituents will have to pay more for oil, is prepared to support Alberta lest Ottawa turn its money-grabbing tactics to his natural gas, once the oil fight is over.

And that is why Premier Sterling Lyon of Manitoba, who has not the same short-term interest as either Blakeney or Bennett, is prepared to bite the oil price bullet, if only to serve as a warning against any federal government move to tax the export of hydro electricity.

The four western premiers look on the ownership and control of natural resources as both an economic and constitutional issue. The economics are there for all to see, and the ownership is what the constitution is all about.

The western provinces are sandbagging their own positions with economic decisions that will be hard to upset. It makes sense to consume energy produced by a renewable fuel, such as the hydro electricity from rivers, rather than to use up finite hydrocarbons

That is why Ottawa will have a difficult time criticizing the proposed Western Canada power grid, a Mani-toba idea that looks like it will be born at the end of a four-month study now taking place involving representa-tives of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and

But it makes even more sense, from an energy conflict point of view, for Alberta to be seen using some of its Heritage Fund to help Manitoba develop its renewable hydro-electric potential along the Nelson River.

The thrust for the grid is coming its own reasons, but Premier Blakeney of Saskatchewan is playing the same, "me too" game he participates in by letting Peter Lougheed do the negotiating for new oil prices, but always keeping his cash register open. Premier Blakeney is not all that anxious to tie up future Saskatche wan power developments to the whims of other provincial and private utilities, but he does not want to/see a heavy-duty transmission line snaking its way across his province without gaining access to it. Some of the support for the Alberta position is clearly political. There is no doubt that if NDP leader Howard Pawley were premier of Manitoba, it would be aligned more closely with the national party position on energy. Pawley would not have the gaping cash register available to Allan Blakeney that fills every time the price of oil goes up.

Protect exports

Three of the four premiers, Lougheed, Bennett and Lyon, see the fight over oil as the first battle in a longer economic and constitutional war. Two of them, Bennett and Lyon, are prepared to impose higher gasoline and oil prices on their constitu-ents if this is the price that has to be paid for the protection of their own vulnerable exports from federal taxes in the future. There is too a feeling that artificially-low oil prices do little to help develop the west. The size of Alberta's Heritage fund is not nearly as irritating to the governments of Manitoba and British Columbia as it is to those in charge of Queen's Park

But then, there are no federal members of parliament sitting in the government caucus from the west, to deliver the message

Leaders' kin affect history

OTTAWA — In this city and dozens of capitals like it, the Billygate scandal ballooning over Washington is more than Jimmy Carter's private hell. It is an uncomfortable reminder that even the most powerful politicians cannot control the foibles and

Hundreds of Canadian politicians, past and present, have carried the seeds of an embarassing family flare-up through their careers — none with more patience and dignity than the current prime minister, Pierre

A quick survey of Canadian history reveals a strangely assorted set of wives, siblings, parents and even the prime minister's office

Business bungler

Sir John A. Macdonald had a father he didn't talk much about. Hugh Macdonald was one of those unlucky businessmen who fails at everything he tries. When he first brought his family from Glasgow to Upper Canada, the elder Macdonald set up a general store in Kingston. It went bankrupt in four years. He tried a second store, then a grist mill, but they too failed.

Finally he took a job as a bank clerk. There were those who always suspected that Sir John A.'s lack of business sense came from his father's side of the family

Robert Borden was another prime minister whose father — luckily for him — escaped the public eye most of the time. Andrew Borden proved so hopeless as a businessman in Nova Scotia that young Robert had to go to work as a teenager to supplement

Then there's William Lyon Mackenzie King.

Had the public known of his bizarre relationships to his mother and his dog while he was alive, he might have been caught in one of the greatest scandals of all time. But the former prime minister locked his family secret away in his diaries with explicit instructions that the books not be opened till after his death. We learned, too, that he turned for guidance to his Irish terrier, Pat, whom he believed deserved the Order of Merit for service to his country.

For sheer color and drama, none of these historical characters rivals Margaret Trudeau, estranged wife of today's prime minister.

Three years ago, the beautiful, headstrong young wife of the prime minister left him. Although she dropped plenty of gossip-circuit hints that the marriage was not all it might be, Canadians were shocked when she actually broke loose

But that was only the first jolt. Still to come were were the bikiniclad pictures from France, the coy suggestions of an affair with Senator Edward Kennedy, the revelations of Prince Charles leering down her and Cuban President Fidel Castro flirting with her outrageous-

The dismayed whispers which greeted Margaret's early revelations were gradually replaced with bluntly-expressed doubts about Trudeau's character judgment and his ability to control those around him.

No one will ever be able to judge with certainty how much political damage her musings and exploits did

Still, it had none of the splash of a packaged Billygate — no Senate investigation, no televised press conferences, no solemn pronouncements from the country's opinion-makers. But the pain and political cost were every bit as real.

Trudeau is not the only modern-day politician who prefers to keep his private life out of the spotlight. Health Minister Monique Begin is the lone federalist in a family of fervent ebec Separatists

Prophets at home

It is to be hoped that readers of your Aug. 1 coverage of city council will exercise a sagaciousness ob-viously in short supply when council voted down a recommended $200 grant to the People to People Petition for Canadian Unity.

Inspiration for the decision was Alderman McElroy's charge that the petition had been "a piece of Liberal flackery," Additional information that its promotion had been "headed by Liberal Senator Keith Cowan" was measure of the evidence on which the grant was shot down. There is no Senator Cowan. The Keith Cowan, private citizen, who organized the campaign has never identified himself with a political party of any

Perhaps it was too much to expect Ald. For example, the fact that provincial premiers of every political stripe had strongly supported the petition - men not

Had its organizer lacked a clean bill of health in that respect, there were plenty of eager separatist strategists poised to exploit its boomerange potential.

Again, it may be too much to expect a majority of Victoria councillors to have figured that out for themselves. They should, however, have realized that a yardstick of Cowan's integrity existed in his having donated two years of sometimes thankless professional effort and a dent in his personal finance to coordinate the national accomplishment.

Had council approved the $200 it would still have been small appreciation. That a Victorian was at the heart of what was accomplished amplified the truism about prophets in their own country. We are, nevertheless, going to need more of them if we are to come through our still broadening crisis as a nation towards which a fearful world can look with hope. — Frederick Watt, 404-1101 Hilda

Too many people spoiling parks

By PHILIP SHABECOFF New York Times

YOSEMITE, Calif. - The beauty of this great national park in the high Sierras depends less on the eye of the eholder than on the beholder's line

Looking upward from the Yose-mite valley, the eye follows tall redwoods and cedars to the summits of towering granite cliffs, over which silver ribbons of water fall from dizzying heights.

But at the horizontal, the field of vision is filled with hot asphalt, slow-moving lines of cars and buses, and crowds of tourists, some visibly irritated by the heat and congestion

There are deteriorating buildings and roads, crowded campgrounds with all vegetation trampled away, and park rangers carrying guns to deal with growing criminal activity.

The national parks, sometimes called the "cathedrals" of American civilization, are in serious trouble, park officials and environmentalists

Restrict access?

Many of them, particularly the older, bigger parks such as Yosemite, Yellowstone and the Grand Capyon, are plagued by excessive use and deteriorating facilities to the point that some National Park Service officials are wondering if they may have to restrict access to certain parks. The parks are also being exposed to threats from the outside, especially energy exploitation and other de-velopment on private land adjacent to their borders

Nor have they escaped some of the social problems that have been trou-bling the nation's urban areas for years. Visitors to Yosemite and Yellowstone are often surprised to learn that these centres of scenic splendor have their own jails, and that the jails are sometimes crowded.

"It used to be that you could leave your tent all day and nobody would touch anything in it," said John A. Tyers, deputy chief of resource management at Yellowstone. "Now there, is a real problem with people leaving their cars at trailheads and coming back to find they've been broken into and cameras and things stolen.

"We also have rapes and violent attacks and drug arrests," he said. "Criminals drift into the park seeking refuge. We have Wells Fargo pick up the money taken in by the concessions to prevent park employees from north-central New Mexico, said, "People are coming here from the cities and bringing their problems

All these problems are acknowledged by officials of the national park system, who say budget con-straints imposed by Congress, despite a period of high inflation and rapid expansion of the system, have rendered them unable to prevent further deterioriation.

"We are in a real dilemma," said Russell Dickinson, director of the National Park Service, noting that the service's budget-has been held level over the past several years.

"Our cultural heritage is being torn apart," said William Whalen, Dickinson's predecessor. "If some thing isn't done, the parks won't be places the people will want to go to. The crowds, the water and air will be so bad that people will say, 'Why should we go there?'"

This spring the park service issued without fanfare a "State of the Parks" report that outlined threats to the integrity of all 326 units in the park system. These ranged from the encroachment of exotic species such as the feral burros in the Grand Canyon, which are destroying vegeta-tion and depleting waterholes — to urban development, contamination of water with toxic agricultural and industrial chemicals, mining activities and "acid rain" from power

In all, 73 kinds of threats were grouped in seven categories — esthetic degradation, air pollution, water pollution, shrinking water sup-plies, minerals and wildlife, exotic species encroachment, physical impact of visitors and state of park

Crown jewels

"Simply stated," the park service said, "the current levels of science and resource management are com pletely inadequate to cope effectively with the broad spectrum of threats and problems which have been identified and discussed in this report."

Recent visits to many of the parks, including several of the biggest and oldest that are known as the "crown jewels of the natural park system," confirmed the presence of serious

"Sometimes the traffic jams you see in the valley are worse than anything you will find in Los Angeles at rush hour," said a park ranger.

Tourist trouble

By JOANNE OMANG The Washington Post

Tourists are a fickle lot. They live cheek-by-jowl with people of a amp on the posies they have come to different, largely urban kind," the dump garbage in the blue water report said. tromp on the posies they have come to see, dump garbage in the blue water caressing the beach and then warn their friends away from the dirty

Such at least are the implications of a report from the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), which sees tourists as sort of a mobile world environmental erisis. This means trouble on several levels for countries that have grown to depend on them.

"Tourism destroys tourism," the report said. The three-year survey of resort areas in the 24 OECD member countries, all of them industrialized, found that "environmental degrada-tion in certain tourist areas (has) reached such a proportion that tour ism is now declining.

Tourists know what they want. They want, they told OECD survey-ors, an attractive landscape first. Then they want a nice elimate, clean air and water and a restful atmosphere. Affordable cost was a poor fifth and good food was last on the

From the host country's point of view, tourism can povide jobs in low-income, low-industry regions, with multiplier effects in construction, road building and communcations. Most importantly, it provides foreign exchange for some nations with mountainous areas "where the quality of the environment is often

However, it siphons off the local labor, "usually to the detriment of traditional activities" such as farming. Beaches and forests developfences that keep the locals out. Plants and animals get trampled, run over and carried off as vandals and thieves arrive with the crowds.

Piles of litter and clouds of exhaust from cars, campers and motorboats pollute the air and water. The local population "often has to change

"Tourist facility development is often disorderly and scattered, giving the landscape a 'motheaten' look," the OECD commented. Police, hospital, sewer and other needs are often 10 to 100 times what the offseason population can afford.

And when the environment goes, so do the tourists, once again disrupt ing the natives. An unnamed inland lake lost 14 per cent of its visitors when water pollution set in. A Mediterranean resort lost its older, higherincome guests to a younger, poorer set when traffic jams and acres of bare skin obliterated the view of the

"However, it was impossible to measure the degree of density which brings about this sort of change," the

The problem will get worse. There were 25 million international travellers in 1945 and 240 million in 1977. That is a growth rate of 8.9 per cent per year, more than double the pace of world economic growth. By 1990 there could be 500 million in the international suitcase set.

Two-thirds of all tourists go to Europe, and the European Economic Community expects five of them for every meter (39 inches) of Mediter ranean coastline this year. The crunch slackens in bad economic times, but not much.

To cope, nations worldwide should promote "nature tourism" that emphasizes the visitor's role in preser ving the place. Environmental considerations should be integrated with tourism promotion plans, and hotel owners, restaurateurs and others pressing for growth should be educat ed on the dangers to their income posed by environmental damage.

"Continued orderly development of the tourist industry depends on the maintenance of the resource on its way of life completely . . . and to which it is based," the study said

Now that he mentioned it, I sure did. Everybody seems to be losing the gosh-darned things. The day before, we'd had 53 couples run into the lobby in a panic crying, "We just lost all our traveller's cheques, only had 54 rooms booked.

"What do you think it means?" Karl asked.

"Since nobody ever comes in here saying they've just lost all their cash," I said, "I think it means you are 53 more times likely to lose traveller's cheques than greenbacks.'

The conversation was interrupted by two panicked people running across the lobby. "Don't tell me, I'll tell you," I tell them. "You just lost all your traveller's cheques.

Up pops Karl from behind the potted palm. "Don't leave home without them," he says.

"Nonsense," says the young lady out it.

"What kind of presidential candidates were they?" I asked.

This is Karl's moment to stride up to the desk holding up the candidates." American presidential candidates," he says. "Don't leave home without

The problem wasn't as simple as all that since, as it turned out, the couple hadn't bought any of the three presidential candidates Karl had

"Those are conservative candidates," the woman said. "Our candidates were liberal candidates.

Well, Karl and I are now in a pickle, as there is nothing to tell these people except to take their loss like good sports and be thankful they haven't lost their traveller's cheques, which the hotel doesn't like to do because it will discourage people from staying there if word gets around that we can't make people feel good about losing things.

To play for time, I suggest they go to their rooms and wait there until they receive a telephone call from

This is why, a few minutes later, I was on the telephone to the three presidential candidates asking if one of them would be willing to help the hotel by saving a young American couple's vacation with a little liberal-

Actually, I didn't reach the candidates themselves, since all three had just lost all their traveller's cheques and rushed off to various hotel lob-bies to have their peace of mind-restored. But their assistants said they were sorry, but there wasn't an ounce of liberalism available any where in the country:

"But what about this poor miser-ble couple? How can you expect them to vote for you?

"Where else are they going to go?" was the universal explanation.

'Well, Karl," I said, "they've got no place else to go. It looks like they're going to stay here for the next four years, and with their luck, when they lose their traveller's cheques, they'll be the kind of traveller's cheques that stay lost forever.'

There was only one thing to do. I phoned their rooms and urged them to convert their traveller's cheques immediately into cash. Karl was on the extension line. "The American Federal Reserve note," he said. "Don't leave the hotel without it."

orial commissioner Stuart Hodgson said Ottawa still looks to the appointed officials, and especially to his replacement as commissioner, John Parker, to give direction and take responsibility in the North.

Hodgson's speech was poorly received by some elected members who have won an increasing share of power in the last eight

Hodgson also spoke at a dinner in his honor Saturday when he was presented with the territories' highest award. In the second speech, he softened his attack on the quest for increased power by elected members and even lauded the new responsibilities they have assumed — a stance more in line with the way Parker has structured the government since taking over from Hodgson 15 months

Although Parker attended the Schreyer dinner Sunday night, he made no comments about the struggle for increased responsi-

In keeping with the rustic northern flavor of the Wildcat Cafe, a popular meet-ing spot for miners in Yellowknife's early days, at least one waiter was dressed in sneakers and jeans with a formal jacket and white bow tie in deference to the governor-general and his family. The Schreyers were also presented with a sketch of the cafe which has being painstakingly restored in recent years

Schreyer later went to a sparsely-attended public reception

The governor-general is making his first official visit to the N.W.T. capital and will make the keynote address today at the open-ing of a three day Royal Society Of Canada symposium marking the centen-ary of the transfer of Arctic Islands from Britain to Canada.

Later in the week, he will visit Coppermine and Cam-bridge Bay and make a special presentation to the crew of the coast guard icebreaker named after Capt. J. E. Bernier who commanded the first sovereignty voyages in the Canadian Arctic in the early years of this century.

Great outdoors is a great break for your budget

To the purists, hiking is the only way to go camp-

For them a rendezvous with nature doesn't mean a $100,000 camper with color television and a self-clean

Hikers want one-on-one combat with nature whether it's the experience of camping with a bare minimum of knife, ground sheet and matches or whether it's a fascination with gear and discussions about things like the merits of woollen versus cotton underwear.

Hiking is also about the least expensive travel vacation available these days. This may account, at least partly, for its popu-

Richardson says its important that hikers choose the right equipment and not shop with the idea that expensive is better.

He cited an example he uses in camping clinics where he shows five types of hiking boots to potential campers. When lasked to choose the best boot the majority inevitably pick the boot that looks the most 'he-man" - thick-soled and heavy

It may look good but it isn't the best boot, says Richardson. Campers should know what they need and not be taken in by image.

The biggest change in retail camping stores has says. Not only do people want to camp and hike they want to look like outdoors-

In his store, customers readily choose tan sleeping bags before navy blue bags. Yet, he said, the blue bag is much less likely to show soil marks.

And don't "over-bag" or over-boot:

Richardson told about one man who went moose hunting with the store's most expensive sleeping bag, a new $400 type, designed for the coldest camping conditions.

Part way through the trip the customer called the shop complaining the bag was cold. Richardson wondered what might be causing the problem and decided to send him a $10 insulation pad to place under the bag.

In case you're wondering

I have often wondered about the history of Beckley Farm, its area and where the farm house was located. Our home on Niagara Street was listed as being located on the farm. M.E.L.

Beckley Farm was part of the original Hudson's Bay Company holdings on southern Vancouver Island and the oldest farm in the province.

In 1843, the year Fort Victoria was established

10 acres of the farm were under cultivation.

Three years later 100 acres were being farmed and Governor James Douglas was building what was then described as a "commodious" dwelling on

The farm was intended to supply vegetables and dairy products to the fort.

1861 a map of Victoria showed the original farm dwellings aproximately at the corner of what are now Simcoe and Menzies streets.

There are thought to be four original dwellings although it's not known whatever became of them.
At around the same time the Hudson's Bay Company was required to give up some of the valuable land it held and eventually it turned some of it over to the Crown and sold off other parcels.

A great number of deeds for property in James Bay indicate that the land originally belonged in the Beckley Farm land holding.

Family of six escapes $150,000 house fire

A family of six escaped without injury when fire destroyed their home overlooking Elk Lake early Sunday with a loss of $150,-000 and their two pet dogs.

Saanich firemen said the blaze started when a patio cot mattress was placed too close to a spotlight which had been left on the previous evening. When the mattress ignited, flames worked up the outer wall under the eaves into the attic and soon spread around the one-storey, cedar-sided house.

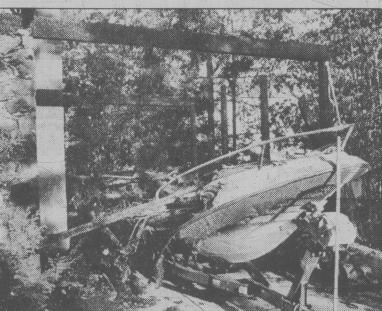

Jack Enston, 5240 Santa Clara, was awakened at 1 a.m. by the sound of flames roaring somewhere in the house, which he could not at first locate. Shouting to his family, he tried to call firemen but the phone was

An extra $20,000 to enable special liftequipped buses to continue operating on the Beacon Hill route was announced on the weekend by Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm.

The lottery grant will keep the buses going until the end of the year and allow an evaluation program to continue for a full 12-month period.

Four regulation B.C. Hydro buses were altered last fall at a total cost of about $90,000 to fit hydraulic lifts to carry wheelchairs and disabled persons from

Crystal's heat no bird killer

The parrots pant a little, but none of the birds in the Crystal Garden aviary is dying from heat exhaustion, aviary manager Don Adams said

Adams is mildy upset about stories circulating around town that several of the birds have suc cumbed to intense heat and lack of circulation inside the glass-covered building.

He said he was even asked about the deaths at a recent party.

A parrot died several weeks ago from a gangrene-infected wound and several finches passed away because of internal parasites, but all the other birds, including a $10,000 pair of hyacinth macaws, are alive and thriving, Adams said.

The glass roof is a source of heating and ventilation problems, but according to Adams the birds have shaded places to rest and don't suffer as much from the heat as the plants.

Bullish market hangs in there

Whispers of a bull market were heard above the familiar chorus of caution last week as Canadian stock markets pulled out of a tailspin.

Some analysts said the market was simply extending a prolonged upswing it embarked on after a selling binge last March. Others placed credit for this week's advance on a kind of reverse oil fever.

John Ing, portfolio manager with Pitfield Mackay Ross Ltd. of Toronto, said the weakening world spot price for oil and more talk of a glut has some people hoping energy prices will fall, resulting in a scramble for stocks that would benefit from lower energy

But Ing warned that the oil surplus is a temporary phenomenon which will affect neither inflation nor the cost of energy in North America, where oil prices are well below world levels.

David Bryson, an analyst with Greenshields Ltd. of Montreal, attri-buted the market's strength to a widening belief that the troubled econ omy is on the road to recovery and that the market has entered a bull phase.

Canadian markets also reflected continuing strength in New York, where the Dow Jones industrial average rose almost 25 points in the week to 954.69, a three-and-a-half year high.

The TSE 300 index finished the week at a record high 2225.39, up 31.31 points

At Montreal, the composite index gained 2.74 points or .75 per cent to close the week at 366.93. The industrial index rose 3.73 points or .95 per

The oil and gas group at Toronto showed little change after taking a plunge at the beginning of the week as talk of an oil glut continued, and recovering later due to some bargain hunting and announcements about the Hibernia oilfield offshore Newfoundland the Kotaneelee gas field in the Yukon. There was also a report that Saudi Arabia was considering raising the price of its crude oil and David Ekmekijan, a broker with Pitfield Mackay Ross, said such a move "should come as no great surprise.

"You're going to see an eight to 10-per-cent increase in the price of oil annually," he said. "Ultimately we may be looking at $100 a barrel, or $200

"The minimum increases will keep up with inflation, and that's saying nothing about supply and demand. The price of oil is going to increase. It's a fact. Anybody who feels that there's going to be lower energy costs anywhere in the world is nuts.

The real estate and construction group at Toronto ended a marathon 15-week advance with its first weekly decline since April 8.

Analysts said the correction was due and may have been precipitated by evidence that interest rates are creeping

The floating Canadian bank rate edged higher for the second consecutive week, rising to 10.39 per cent from Ekmekjian said investors see the market as being cheap. With shortterm rates in the U.S. down to 8.75 per cent to nine per cent from a high of near 18 per cent earlier this year, investors now see the stock market as a better risk than other investment mar-

And with interest rates moving up, he said, nobody wants to commit longterm funds

But Ekemekijan warned that the market cannot always be explained rationally.

"The market has always been emotional," he said. It's the combination of the whims of . . . how many people?

Charges of conflict of interest also were traded. Buckley holds management positions in other pe-troleum-related companies, and Duby is a consultant for Page Petroleum Ltd. of Calgary, which Buckley called a

Big earnings for Wardair

EDMONTON (CP) - Wardair International Ltd., has ounced a sharp turnaround in its financial results for the first six months of this year.

The Edmonton-based airline reported consolidated earnings of $7,112,000 for the first six months of 1980 in contrast to a loss of $5,355,000 in the same period

The earnings this year include a non-recurring gain of $2,115,000 from the sale of assets.

The company attributed the turnaround to a better business climate on the North Atlantic and expanded operating authority.

Maxwell Ward, president of Wardair, said the turnaround relates more to the fact that last year was so

"This time last year we were engaged in a real dogfight over the North Atlantic with our competitors."

The price-war was resolved after all the airlines were hurt by it and realized they could not cut prices to generate business at a time when they were facing substantial increases in fuel costs.

Another factor in the increased earnings, said Ward, is the company's fourth Boeing 747 was in service for the full six months this year and only for two months during the first half of 1979.

The expanded operating authority from the Canadian government, allows Wardair to fly passengers between points in Canada.

Grain ship sails $191,000 later

VANCOUVER (CP) - A grain ship pulled out of Vancouver harbor Sunday night, 24 hours late and with its crew $191,000 richer.

The delay was caused by negotiations in which the International Transportation Federation won was the third in three weeks for the union.

"We got $191,000 for the Tropicana, $120,000 for another crew the week before and $132,000 the week" before that," said Gerry McCullough, a union in-

The year was 1966, the place was Amsterdam, and I was playing in the world pair championship with Dorothy Hayden. She got to three notrump and West (Victor Goldberg of Scot-land) was on lead. He turned to her and asked, in broad Scots: "Did ye open woon cloob, lassie?" Mrs. Hayden answered that she had opened one heart, not one club, and Goldberg thereupon led a diamond.

Mrs. Hayden won with the queen, making a men-tal note that East almost certainly had the queen of hearts! It seemed impossible to her that Goldberg could have that card; he would surely have remembered which suit South had bid had he held a card as important as the queen of hearts

At trick two, she played the spade eight and let it ride. East won with the king and returned a dia-

Blues topple leaders again

BELLINGHAM - Victoria Blues made it three wins in four Northwest League baseball games against the Bellingham Mariners Sunday with a 6-5

The Blues broke open a 2-1 game with a four-run spree in the top of the sixth inning. With one out, Joe Lorenz and Gary Humpston walked, Jim Gattis grounded out, Don Hyman walked, Rod Murphy hit a two-run single and the extra run scored when the ball went through the left-fielder's legs for an error. Murphy scored on a wild pitch.

Mariners, who edged the Blues 6-4 here Saturday night to move four games ahead of their Victoria rivals at the top of the league's Northern Division, came back with one run in the seventh inning and three in the eighth.
On Saturday night, the count was even 4-4 when Kevin McGann hit a two-run homer in the eighth.

The Blues play Medford tonight and Tuesday night at Royal Athletic Park and on Wednesday and Thursday evening they host Eugene COLOGNE, West Germany (AP) - Canadian Angella Taylor continued to dominate the women's sprints during a current tour of European track meets and Renaldo Nehemiah of the United States equalled this year's world's best time in the 110-metre hurdles Sunday, clocking 13.23 seconds at an international track meet.

Taylor, the 21-year-old Jamaican now living in Toronto who won both the 100 and 200 at a West Berlin meet Friday, was an easy winner Sunday in 11.38 seconds.

Allan Wells of Britain, the Olympic winner in the 100, won the event here in 10.19, just ahead of American Stanley Floyd in 10.21. American Edwin Moses was clocked in 48.53 in winning the men's 400 hurdles.

Louise Ritter of the U.S. was a surprise winner in the women's high jump with a height 1.89 metres. Debbie Brill of Mission, B.C., finished fourth with 1.83.

West Germans Elizabeth Schacht and Vera Steiert finished one-two in the women's 1,500 metres with Debbie Scott of Victoria third. Scott's time of 4:13.12 compared with 4:12.92 for the winner and was her second fastest 1,500 metre race of the year.

TORONTO - Nina Bland of Victoria dropped a 6-2, 6-2 decision to Ilana Kloss of South Africa in the second round of the women's qualifying round of the Canadian Open tennis championships Sunday with their victories Top seeded Bjorn Borg came to Toronto on Saturday night from Sweden, where he has been resting since winning the Wimbledon championship.

Bland had beaten Renee Blount of the United States 4-6, 7-6. 6-4 Saturday

GROVE CITY, Ohio (AP) - Bob Lutz of the United States overpowered Terry Rocavert of Australia 6-4, 6-3) Sunday to win the singles title of a $75,000 tennis tournament. Lutz, 32, of San Clemente, Calif., scoring well on his service, captured his first Grand Prix title since last November and prize money of $13,150.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mel Purcell's longshot dream fell a little short. But Purcell's second-place finish in the U.S. Open clay court tennis tournament Sunday still put the 21-year-old rookie in rather select company

Only one other player, Jimmy Connors in 1973, had ever reached the finals in any major tournament after having to earn his way into the starting field through a series of qualifying matches. Purcell lost in the final to hard-hitting Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina 7-5, 6-3. On Saturday, top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd won her sixth women's clay court championship with a 6-4, 6-3 victory over 15-year-old Andrea Jaeger.

BURNABY (CP) — B.C. won the Western Canadian Under-16 soccer club championship Sunday by defeating Manitoba-5-0. Both teams will represent the West at the Canadian finals in Kitchener, Ont. Aug. 22 to 24.

Bob Rosenlund led the B.C. attack with three goals.

Mike Zylla and David Campeotto each scored once. In Dartmouth, N.S., Oakville Trebor One won all three games in round-robin play to win the Eastern Canada under-16 championship. Oakville and Dollard of Quebec advance to the nationals.

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Preliminary challenge trials ended Sunday with Australia leading the four-boat foreign field for the chance to break the U.S. grip on the America's Cup. Baron Marcel Bich's France 3 tar-nished Australia's unblemished record, defeating the 12-metre from down under by one minute, three seconds in the 13.5-mile course

Lionheart, with new English skipper Laurie Smith at the helm, beat Sverige of Sweden in eight-knot southwesterlies on Rhode Island Sound by 1:45, after the four boats abandoned an initial race for lack of wind The yacht Australia now has a 6-3 record, while France 3 is at 5-4; Lionheart at 4-5; and Sverige at 3-6. The yachts will meet again Thursday

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) - Sergio Palma of Argentina captured the World Boxing Association junior feather-weight title Saturday with a fifth-round knockout over Leo Randolph of Tacoma, Wash. Palma, 24, who weighed in at 121½ pounds, put the short-lived champion to the canvas twice in the first round and finished him with a series of left-right combinations to the head at 1:12 of the fifth

VANCOUVER — It's like a whole new series going into Wednesday's fifth game at Memorial Arena after Victoria Shamrocks recovered from their Saturday night loss to edge the Vancouver Burrards 15-12 Sunday and tie up their best-of-seven Western Lacrosse Association playoff semi-final 2-2.

Burrards went ahead 2-1 in the series with a thrilling 13-12 triumph over the Rocks in Victoria Saturday but, before a home crowd of 1,200 fans at Kerrisdale Arena Sunday, the Vancouver squad could stay ahead

The Rocks trailed 4.3 at that stage but, with Jim Lynch having his best game of the year — he scored six and league-leading scorer Kevin Alexander getting three goals, they reversed that to 9-6 after two periods. And they never looked back.

Chris Hall and Jim Boyd got two goals each. Other Shamrock scorers were Art Webster and Norm Baker. Bruce Turris scored three times for Burrards while Dan Perreault and Doug Hayes got two goals each and the one-goal scorers were John Swan, Mike Holden, Eric Otterstrom and Pat Ryan. Vancouver outshot Victoria 65 to 42 and the hero of the night was Victoria goalkeeper Larry Smeltzer who Coquitlam Adanacs defeated New Westminster Salmonbellies 13-11 Saturday night to take a 3-0 lead in the other semi-final series.

Saturday night's game in Victoria was a fast-paced, tension-packed, hard-hitting contest. Burrards led 5-3 after the first period but the Rocks came back on the shooting of Alexander and Boyd and the goaltending of Smeltzer to lead 9-8 after 40 minutes.

Three quick goals early in the third period put Vancouver ahead 11-9 and Terry Bingley scored at 9:10 to Shamrocks fought back to within a goal with Lynch and Hall scoring on fine plays.

With a little under two minutes remaining. Swan picked up a loose ball, broke away from Norm Baker and The Rocks didn't quit and with the crowd making more noise than has been heard at the arena all season, they pulled Smeltzer for an extra attacker and Boyd scored with a minute and eight seconds left. There was one more chance for the Rocks with eight seconds on the clock but goaltender Jim Poelzer stopped Rick Baker from point-blank range. Boyd scored four goals, Alexander added three and Norm Baker, Scott Browning and Rhys Wickes got

For Vancouver, Swan scored four goals, Turris had three, McMillan and Bingley two each and Stu

Both goaltenders were outstanding with Smeltzer making 34 saves and Poelzer stopping 35 shots.

Lisa Roy, Pat Walter capture singles titles

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. — The 98th Royal Canadian Henley regatta wound up its five-day stay Sunday on the course that was part of the original Welland Canal and the event left behind some surprises and some happy me-

One of the surprises was that this was, indeed, the 98th Henley, not the 97th, regardless of what the programs said and old timers insisted.

It seems there was a Henley in 1919 though many said there had not been with so many just home from the First World War, and an influenza epidemic. A check in a 1919 Standard confirmed there was one But the other surprises were more recent

Of no surprise was the fact the St. Catharines Rowing Club won its 20th straight championship with nine vic-tories in the five days and Ridley College took the efficiency trophy, given for the best percentage of The biggest surprise came in one of the major events when Pat Walter of Victoria was a full three open lengths ahead of New York's Jim Dietz, in the championship single. Even more surprising was that Dietz was also beaten by Doug Hamilton of the Kingston, Ont., Rowing Club, who finished second.

Dietz, 32, who spends most of his waking hours on the water and has been coming to the Henley since he was 16, had won the event 11 times out in 13 years

Walter didn't really consider it that much of a surprise. A 21-year-old who is going into Simon Fraser University in British Columbia this fall, he said after the race he had never raced Dietz in singles before but had eamed with others to beat him in pairs.

Lisa Roy, 21, also with the Victoria City Rowing Club, had a good Henley and will take home one of the happy memories. She won the senior women's singles Sunday when she stroked her way to the narrowest of wins over her team-mate. Janice Mason. And she had also won the A pretty girl who really doesn't look as if she has enough muscles to move a shell the way she does, said she's been in the game for three or four years and has been rowing internationally for two years.

The Sellars family of Windsor, Ont., will also have nice memories. Brothers Bob, 23, Jim, 16, David, 20, and Doug, 24, got together to win the senior 135-pound fours for the Windsor Rowing Club.

Victoria City had a third-place finish Sunday in the senior 155-pound doubles and University of Victoria was third in senior 155-pound pairs.

On Saturday, Victoria City athletes finished second in men's open dash singles (won by Dietz), senior women's heavy quad sculls and open quad sculls, placed third in lightweight women's doubles and fourth in the men's association single.

Injuries hamper Budgets, but Peterbilt bats hurt more

Injuries knocked three starters out of the Victoria lineup, but field manager Harvey Stevenson didn't see that as an excuse for Budgets' loss to Seattle Peterbilt in Sunday's showdown for the Northwest Men's Fastball League playoff championship.

A better reason, says Harv, was: "Peterbilt hit four-hit, 5-0 victory.

"Give Peterbilt their dues," said Stevenson. "They put the ball into play and we didn't.

Guenter was sharp in relief roles but neither Mark Smith nor Dave Wilson — Victoria's other pitchers could prevent Peterbilt from "putting the ball into play." Peterbilt banged out 19 hits in Sunday's two games against Victoria. Budgets managed nine.

Victoria finished the inaugural Peace Arch tour-nament with three regulars on the sidelines. Outfielder Reg Underwood suffered a pulled knee muscle and second baseman Carl Walker was idled with a charley horse. First baseman Pete Songhurst suffered a

Four Budgets on all-star club

The regular-season champion Victoria Budgets placed four players on the Northwest Men's Fastball League all-star team. Pitcher Rob Guenter, catcher Bob Burrows, outfielder Dennis Eckert and third baseman John Green were named to the 15-man squad, selected by coaches and managers and announced during the league's championship tournament at Royal Athletic Park at the weekend.

Graham Arnold, a New Zealand native pitching for Seattle Peterbilt, was selected the most valuable pitcher while catcher Gord Fadden of Clearbrook Four Stars, the league's top batter, was named most valuable player.

They also were named to the all-star squad along with first basemen George Nokes of Peterbilt and Terry Anderson of Yakima; second baseman Brian Murray of Clearbrook; shortstop Scott Nunamaker of Seattle Westside; third baseman Jeff Borrer of Peterbilt, and outfielders Len Pupo of Westside, Rod Dirks of New Westminster Terminal Pub, Bill Stewart of Peterbilt and Merle Bragg of Woodinville Lumber.

Green, outfielder Dennis Eckert and Guenter were voted to the tournament all-star team along with pitcher Ray Masse, Gord (catcher) and Al (first base) Fadden, all of Clearbrook, second baseman Mike Polis of Westside; shortstop Bill Adkison and outfielder Dean Crow, both of Yakima; and outfielder Jim Nokes of Peterbilt.

Green, 7-for-14 after singling in his final at-bat, was the tournament's top hitter with a .500 average. Guenter was selected the outstanding pitcher while Arnold was honored as the most valuable player.

Appeal of Hudon sentence follows his two-victory day

Joe Hudon racked up two more tri-umphs Saturday but it could be one of the last happy days in a couple of weeks for the leading driver in the harness-racing meet at Sandown Raceway.

Hudon, who scored with B.C. Adios in the second and Pardner Jove in the eighth Saturday, is appealing a fine of $250 and a 15-day suspension handed out by the B.C. Racing Commission;

Hudon was set down when a routine drug test of one of his horses, B.C. Cinder, proved positive, but was permitted to continue driving after filing an appeal.

Hudson's appeal of the sentence was scheduled to be heard today.

Also expected soon is, a decision on trainer George Brown, who had horses he handles withdrawn from races. Friday and Saturday because of a positive test on one of his horses that ran on a previous racing day.

manager Jim Keeling, Sr., said he his hoping to institute Sunday racing at Sandown but admitted the chance of a switch this year "is quite slim."

A change in the Municipal Act, introduced in the B.C. legislature Friday, opened the door and Keeling plans to approach the council of North Saanich, which does not as yet have a Sunday sports bylaw.

Sunday racing is "certainly" going to be tried in 1981 and possibly as soon as the harness set moves to Cloverdale for the fall-and-winter meeting.

On the track Saturday, Recount Time won the featured preferred race for a second straight time and driver Mike Olito scored his first victory at the meeting on Charms All ($16.90) as a crowd of 1,695 wagered $135,377.

Pulling a roll of bills as thick as a man's fist from his pocket, the customer in an Anchorage hotel coffee shop peeled off a $20 bill to pay for strawberry pie and glass of milk. But the waitress said someone already had picked up the tab. "Who paid for it?" inquired the surprised patron. "I did," piped up a young banker at the end of the counter. "Now I'll have something to tell my wife when I go back to Seattle." What he'll be able to tell her is that he picked up the tab for one of the world's wealthiest men, Nelson Bunker Hunt. The Texas billionaire, in town for a friend's funeral, was quick to jump up and shake the man's hand. "Why, that's the first time that ever happened to me," Hunt said. "It's usually the other way around."

people in Solon the census had counted. So he decided to challenge the preliminary federal census figures. After sitting down with three longtime Solonites and block-by-block maps of the Iowa city he came up with an additional 15 housing units and an extra 183 people. The difference between Wright's counting of 1,023 people and the census bureau's count is more than a matter of civic pride. It's a matter of civic bucks. Wright said Solon stands to lose $7,500 a year if the preliminary population figure holds, and "that's a mighty large slice of the man could starve to death on that!

It happens that I am a hearty fellow with a large appetite and a digestion like a crocodile's. In spite of this liking for my groceries, I managed to stay stylishly slim for many of my years. Then two things happened. I fell victim to middle-aged spread, and I quit smoking. The effect of this double whammy was to shoot my weight up. Over-night, it seemed, the waistband of my pants became too tight for me. Since my appetite stayed healthy and my-digestion rugged, this state of affairs didn't bother me unduly. I might have kept on gaining a pound or two by gentle degrees if we hadn't chosen one day to go on an expedition to that heavily-Anglicized district of central Vancouver Island called the Comox.

We lost ourselves on a turny-twisty street, and looked around for someone of whom to ask directions.

An English type hove in sight. Like me, he was silver-haired. But there the resemblence ended. In his well-ripened tweed jacket and grey flannels, he was slender as a snake. His chest projected a good four inches beyond his belly, which was flat as a board, and he looked like a million Courteously, he directed us to our destination, then strode away with well-sprung stride. We watched him admiringly. I made an effort to hoist my chest out of my stomach, but it didn't work very-well.

bit like him." Next morning, I found our bathroom scales set out and waiting in the middle of our bedroom floor.
"All right, Porky," Win

said. "Climb on board." I obliged. Win peered down at the dial. She bent as if in disbelief for a closer inspection. Then she said, "Wow! We'll have to do something about that."

Later that day, I found her with a mess of clippings spread on a kitchen count-er. She was studying one set absorbedly. I kibitzed over her shoulder. What she had was a clutch of recipes printed by The Times in January. With a sinking feeling, I read the introductory paragraph.

Medicare bonanza replaced by web?

By DR. BOB YOUNG

I received a personal letter from the Minister of Health a while back. So did every other doctor in the province. This is an innovation colleagues and I can not recall it

Why did the Honorable Rafe Mair decide to write us at this time a month after he cancelled his appearance at the Medical Association's Annual Meeting? Why the sudden interest in the practicing physicians of British Columbia?

The doctors of B.C., and indeed in the whole of Canada, have been trapped in an unusual economic web. Following the introduction of Medicare most doctors noted an increase in income, largely because their bills were paid. The relative bonanza was short-lived, and the doctors have seen their income in relation to other members of society deteriorate in recent years.

In British Columbia the doctors lost ground by accepting a freeze on fee increases in 1971. Incomes were effectively frozen by the anti-inflation guidelines of a few years ago, and negotiations in other years have not produced income increases that have kept up with inflation. Costs of running a practice have skyrocketed, as they have in all businesses, but doctors do not have the option of passing their increased costs on to the Doctors have two further difficulties. If they work long hours most make a good income. Physicians with the "rich doctor" image have difficulty making a case for the fact that they are falling behind. Secondly doctors are very loath to support their position by taking job action or withdrawing services — in fact most have made it known that they would not do this. They therefore lose the strongest negotiation lever any group pos-

The government knows this, and many doctors feel they are being exploited by Medicare, subsidizing the system by working for less than they are worth. The Medical Association is under strong pressure from the membership to negotiate vigorously, if necessary, to significantly increase take-home pay.

The Honorable Rafe Mair is aware of this also. His letter, which attempts to point out how fortunate the doctors of B.C. are, is seen by myself and my colleagues as being pre-negotiation manoeuvering.

Dr. Young welcomes letters from column readers. Write in care of the Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria,

Scraps make up this 'satch'

Who is 'Satch' Well, directly to us - they carry Satch was a character in the Bowery Boys — remember? He was the one who always wore his cap

Designer Norma Hem-broff, who has shown her craft-making abilities on television as well as through teaching in Edmonton and surrounding communities, has brought the fun of this cap to the quilting medium. Made with scraps left over from sewing projects, or new materials in velveteen, corduroy, denim, heavy cottons, or even suede-like fabrics, this little quilted hat has wonderful possibilities for dressing up your fall wardrobe. For the back-to-school bunch it's the greatest!

Made with just one-third of a metre of fabric and a piece of quilt batt, there are just 12 crown pieces and two for the brim. Once assembled, the cap is tried on — yes, it appears to be bulgy. This is where the quilting comes in. Quilt in concentric rings starting from the top of the crown. Use a contrasting thread if you wish. This quilting serves to bring in bulk of fabric and make a cosy fit. If you're not into quilting, you can still make the cap without the extra stitches — simply adjust pattern accordingly. Complete directions are given with the patfor both children's and adult sizes. Try this perky cap — it's fun to

Such a book is the Quilting Manual by Dolores Hinson Recently available in Canada, this book is the product of many years of re search into quilts and quilters by Ms. Hinson through personal contact with quilters, quilt collec-tors and curators of museums. One of these was Miss Doris Bowman, curator of the Smithsonian col lection which I visited in Washington, D.C., last February. Ms. Hinson feels she has much to say to bridge the gap between the conventional quilt books and what she desired as a more comprehensive coverage. This book is the culmination of her years of collecting patterns and combing quilt books. Her favorite hobby comes through as almost a cure-all, with which those of us involved in the craft-art-form will most assuredly agree. Size of tip misjudged

TORONTO (CP) — Wai-tresses say the nickels you put down for a tip may look like quarters to their em-

A ministry of labor survey released Friday shows waitresses, waiters and bartenders reporting tips much lower than the amount their employers have reported to Ontario government officials.

Employers and em-ployees widely disagree on the amount of tips taken home after pooling or sharing with other staff, according to the survey's preliminary results.

The greatest gap was between employers and their employees serving liquor. The waitresses and waiters reported taking home $1.28 an hour in tips, while their employers estimated the amount to be $3.75.

Waitresses and waiters serving only food said they netted 93 cents an hour in tips, but their employers estimated it to be $1.30

Those serving both food and liquor said they were left $1.78 an hour in tips, but their employers pegged that amount at $2.63

Bartenders who both mix and serve drinks said they took home an average of 93 cents an hour in tips, while their managers reported that to be $1.68. Andrew Cornwall, an economist with the ministry's research branch said the survey was started last fall to determine the ployees and the tip-sharing 000 study will be completed

Flowers and fish: how are they alike?

British Columbia fishermen, sports anglers and commercial alike, look upon the lowly dogfish as a curse, yet in Japan this fare from the deep is highly valued and it fetches handsome prices.

There are similar and malies in the world of hor-ticulture. Many native North American plants, like prophets without honor in their own house, are often not accepted as plants worthy of consideration in their own land.

As a matter of fact, the beauty and usefulness of many plants native to the Western Hemisphere went unrecognized until they were brought to the Old World, gained fame there, and returned in triumph to their homeland.

An excellent example of this injustice was the common tomato which was only reluctantly re-admitted to the North American scene after it gained wide praise throughout the world.

And now a wholesale grower in New York is reintroducing into their homeland a family of western plants which have beautified European gar-dens for centuries. These are the small-flowering or species clematis, relatives of the popular large-flowering garden clematis. These natives offer the gardener massive floral dis-plays featuring flower forms and colors found in none of the larger-flowered Development having destroyed much of their natural habitats, the species clematis became an endangered species in North America. In fact, their North American identity was just about forgotten with so many of them garden notes by helen chesnut planted and loved in European gardens.

But now, many of these beautiful different clematis have been introduced to the continent, tested, grown in quantity and are beginning to appear in mail-order catalogues and at retail nurseries.

Most of the small-flowering clematis are wild varietites that require little pruning and may be left to ramble through trees if space is available.

Flammula, or Fragrant Virgin's Bower, has power-fully scented, pure white blooms. Its vines reach 20 . to 30 feet (six to nine tites of species elematis gust and September. These small-flowered clematis tend to be much hardier than their less wild relatives and many are quite hardy in the coldest Prairie regions which makes them a good bet for the B.C. interior.

With any kind of luck, more of these newly introduced native vines will become available at local nurseries. A major suppli er is Arthur Steffen, Inc., Fiarport, New York 14450: Park Seeds and Wayside Gardens both U-S firms each carries a few varie-

French pipe spills oil

CHATEAURENARD, France (AP) — French engineers early today plugged a leak in a major underground oil pipeline that spewed thousands of gallons of crude, polluting nearby rivers and irrigated farmland.

Officials said the gusher that sprang from the break Sunday was so powerful it uprooted a nearby apple tree.

Emergency squads of the pipeline operators quickly sealed valves on both sides of the break but could not immediately halt the leak in a section between the valves. The leak finally was stopped today, but work crews still were busy pumping oil out of the damaged section.

The break occurred near Chateauren-ard, 45 kilometres north of Marseille, on one of the three 800-km pipes carrying crude oil to Strasbourg, on the Rhine River, from French Mediterranean

Floods threaten

NEW DEHLI, India (UPI) — Thousands of terrified villagers have fled their homes for fear the flood-swollen Ganges River will burst two dams in northeastern India, reports from the region said today.

Officials in the northern states of Bihar and Uttar Pradesh said torren-tial rains over the weekend have raised the level of the Ganges and its major tributaries well over estab-lished danger marks, widening breaches in the Bimer and Jeetpur dams near the two state's borders.

The opening in the Bimer Dam was more than a mile wide and the muddy, rapid water of the Buri Gan-dak, a tributary of the Ganges, was tearing away 3-foot-wide chunks of Sunday's incident was the first shark-related injury reported in the area, although a shark bit a surfboard last week between Fort Macon and Emerald in Carteret County.

Soviet's Afghan hold slips

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Reports from Afghanistan said today the controlling Parcham faction of Afghan President Babrak Karmal's Communist Party has splintered, fur-ther weakening the position of his Soviet-supported government.

Just three weeks after a purge of officials of Karmal's rivals in the Khalq faction, his own followers are badly splintered, said a former Afghan official who travelled to the Indian capital recently from Afghan-

One faction, which includes Karmal's followers, insists the existing government that came to power with the invasion of an estimated 90,000 Soviet troops in December should have full authority to interpret and apply Afghan laws and those of the People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan.

A second group within the Par-cham, or flag, faction has publicly criticized Karmal for conducting a lawless state.

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP) — A team of three Canadian and three British canoeists on a daring kayak trip around Baf-fin Island's Hall Peninsula has cancelled the return leg of the voyage because of difficult ice

Paul Reaney — a fourth British member of the team who was forced to return to Frobisher Bay after suffering a back injury — said early today that the six have two days of paddling left before reaching their goal of Allan Island, a major Inuit settlement.

The group, which left Frobisher Bay on July 20 in single-man kayaks, had originally planned to paddle the last half of the 1,000-

Reaney emphasized that the group — which includes two Inuit paddlers — considers the trip to be a 100-per-cent success" and added that the return leg "was a bonus anyway because we were covering the same ground."

The group wanted to pay tribute to Inuit history and culture by visiting 12 traditional settlements, some of which are considered ancient by the Inuit themselves. The expedition was also timed to mark the centennial of the transfer of the High Arctic Islands to Canada from Britain.

They also stopped at the ruins of a house built by British explorer Sir Martin Frobisher in 1576 as a base camp on an Arctic island.

"The trip was not designed for speed because a lot of time was spent socializing with Inuit at the various camps," Reaney said.

Asked whether the group was tired, he laughed and said the decision had nothing to do with decision had nothing to do with fatigue because they had paddled an average of only 25 kilometres a day under the adverse conditions. "At that rate they could have kept going for the next three years," he added with a chuckle. As for temperatures, he said the nights are already becoming colder and there is a thin cover of ice on the sea some mornings.

Three arrested in Ont. killings

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan Toronto Police said today three people have been arrested in connection with the murder of four people last month in west Toronto.

Detectives were expected to hold a news conference today to release details of the arrests. A police staff sergeant said the three have each been charged with first degree murder, but he would not comment further.

The arrests were apparently made early Sunday

On July 26, the bodies of three men and a woman were found bound and gagged in a home. The throats of Lenny Martindale, 55, Pearl Savas, 51, the woman with whom he was living, Huey MacDonald, 48, and Ron MacDonald, 48, had been cut.

In case you're wondering

Thave often wondered about the history of Beckley Farm, its area and where the farm house was located. Our home on Niagara Street was listed as being located on the farm, M.E.L.

Beckley Farm was part of the original Hudson's Bay Company holdings on southern Vancouver Island and the oldest farm in the province.

In 1843, the year Fort Victoria was established 10 acres of the farm were under cultivation. Three years later 100 acres were being farmed and Governor James Douglas was building what was then described as a "commodious" dwelling on the property

The farm was intended to supply vegetables and dairy products to the fort.

In 1861 a map of Victoria showed the original farm dwellings aproximately at the corner of what are now Simcoe and Menzies streets.

There are thought to be four original dwellings although it's not known whatever became of them. At around the same time the Hudson's Bay Company was required to give up some of the valuable land it held and eventually it turned some of it over to the Crown and sold off other parcels. A great number of deeds for property in James Bay indicate that the land originally belonged in the Beckley Farm land holding.
